The Saif Ghobash Banipal Prize

Established in 2006 and most generously sponsored by Omar Saif Ghobash and his family in memory of his father, a passionate bibliophile. Supported by Arts Council England. The prize, for the translation of Arabic into English, was established by Banipal Magazine and the Banipal Trust for Arab Literature.

An annual prize (£3,000) for published translations of full-length works of imaginative and creative writing of literary merit and general interest

The annual deadline for entries is 28 February

Eligibility for the 2014 award:

- Entries should be published translations of full-length works of imaginative and creative writing of literary merit and general interest, published in the original Arabic after, or during, the year 1967, and first published in English translation in 2013.
- Entries can have been published in English anywhere in the world but must be available for purchase in the United Kingdom via a distributor or online.

How to enter:

- Submissions must be made by the publisher.
- Please complete this entry form and send it with five copies of the translation and three copies of the original work (please mark photocopies with the English title) to:

Paula Johnson, The Society of Authors, 84 Drayton Gardens, London SW10 9SB
